Mission

Founded in 1910, the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities is a museum of cultural history that preserves, interprets, and collects buildings, landscapes, and objects reflecting New England life from the seventeenth century to the present, for the enjoyment and benefit of all.

SPNEA promotes the highest standards of excellence in preservation, makes its technical expertise widely available, and uses its nationally significant collections as the basis for educational programs, exhibitions, research, and publications to further the appreciation and understanding of New England culture.

Cover: In 1922 the Province House, built in 1679 and for many years the residence of royal governors, gave way to a wrecker's ball to make space for a movie theater and offices. The Old South Meeting House just to the right stands to this day, but the more remarkable Province House could not be saved despite early preservationists' efforts. See "The Province House and the Preservation Movement" beginning on page 5.
